Road Woes

It's been a different Mariners team home vs. road through the first 10 games this season. Wednesday's 5-0 loss to the Steelheads dropped the Mariners to 2-5 away from Portland, and was their fourth loss in the last five on the road dating back to Halloween in Trois-Rivieres. Although Wednesday was the first time they've been shut out this season, Maine is averaging an anemic 1.9 goals per game on the road vs. their much healthier 3.7 per game mark at home. The Mariners have been saddled with a lot of travel early on, having to play 12 of their first 16 games on the road - currently in the midst of an 8 of 9 stretch that began on October 30. They'll be home for Thanksgiving Eve next week before jumping right back on the bus and spending the ensuing weekend in Glens Falls, NY. The Mariners open December with two at home, but are immediately hit with another 5-game trip from Dec. 5-13. From that point, 30 of the final 49 games of the season are at home.

Missing Max

There's no question that the Mariners felt the absence of leading scorer Max Andreev on Wednesday, who was recalled to Providence last week. The dynamic forward has 11 points and 5 goals on the season, pacing the Mariners in both categories, and has been a unique force on the penalty kill scoring a league-leading four shorthanded goals along the way. Andreev posted 62 points last season in his first campaign in Maine, earning himself an AHL deal with their affiliate. He made his AHL season debut in Providence on Sunday.
