BACK TO IT

Following a 10-day break, The South Carolina Stingrays hit the ice on New Year's Eve as South Carolina makes a trip to the Upstate to see the Greenville Swamp Rabbits for the first of three games this week. On Friday, the Stingrays remain on the road as they make their first trip to Greensboro, North Carolina to see the Greensboro Gargoyles on Friday night before hosting Greensboro on Sunday.

BACK TO THE UPSTATE The Stingrays and Swamp Rabbits meet for the seventh time this season on Wednesday night. The last time the two sides met was on Dec. 12 where Romain Rodzinski had the overtime game-winning goal 55 seconds into overtime to beat Greenville, 4-3. The Stingrays lead the season series, 4-2-0, and are 2-1-0 in Greenville this year. The two teams will meet five more times.

PK COMING TO PLAY South Carolina's penalty kill has sorted out its struggles over the past few weeks. In the month of December, the Stingrays penalty kill is working at over 90%, and has allowed only two power play goals across the last eight games. South Carolina is now operating at 84.1% this season, which has entered them into the top ten in the league.

POWER PLAY PRODUCTION The Stingrays powerplay has become a big factor of South Carolina's success this season. SC's PP is working at a 21.9% clip, sixth best in the ECHL. At home this season, the Stingrays are 14/54 (25.9%), the fourth highest rated PP in the ECHL while at home. The Stingrays have scored on the power play in seven of the last ten games.

STACKING AGAINST THE DIVISION The Stingrays continue a very South Division heavy schedule this December. South Carolina against the South Division this season is 15-11-1-0, while holding a 2-0 record against the North Division. 60 of South Carolina's 72 games this season are against the South Division, including this stretch of 16 straight games against opponents in the division.
